Let's enjoy it while it's here!!

Summer Heat & Dehydration.

When it's hot, your body pumps a higher volume of blood to your skin causing you to sweat. If your body is struggling to cool off, your core temp may rise and your heart will have to work harder as it pumps blood to meet the additional demands of stimulating a sweat response. If you are sweating because you are overheated, staying hydrated is one of the best ways you can support your body and help it cool off. Be mindful of the early symptoms of dehydration; feeling dizzy, tired or nauseous. So keep drinking that water this summer it is very important to your health.
